I found this and thought that it might be of interest to you even though it's dated. LANI is a long established non-profit operating in greater LA. And they are friends. Monica Carlos is at 323-482-0922 if you want to investigate further or determine if these sessions are still available. I don't know anyone at the LAFPC.

Subject: (With Attachment) From Corner Store to Community Grocer: Business Development Training for Neighborhood Markets

Dear all,

The Los Angeles Food Policy Council is proud to offer "From Corner Store to Community Grocer," a first-of-its-kind Neighborhood Market Training on July 26, 2012. The training will support owners and staff of convenience stores, corner stores and neighborhood markets in South and East Los Angeles, primarily, with skills related to expanding healthy, fresh food grocery services at their stores. Many of the participating stores serve communities where access to healthy food is limited and the food retail environment is dominated by fast food outlets and junk food marketing. This training is for the neighborhood market that is ready to successfully promote a greater variety of nutritious and fresh food.

The training will offer free workshops and consultations with industry professionals, consultants, public agencies and community-based organizations who can lend expertise in the following areas:

- ☐ Healthy Food Procurement & Distribution
- ☐ Strategic Branding, Marketing & Promotion
- ☐ Merchandising & Store Format
- ☐ Product Development
- ☐ Local & Organic Foods
- ☐ Permits
- ☐ Management & Business Development Skills
- ☐ Resource Development
- ☐ Community Needs & Participation

Please help us get the word out to neighborhood markets in your area. More details and location forthcoming. If you are interested in sharing resources & information at the training, please fill out the attached presenter proposal form and email to healthyneighborhoodmarkets@gmail.com.

Cheers,

--
